

Client Relationship Summary – Form CRS

March 29, 2024

Patient Capital Management, LLC (“PCM” or the “Firm”) is an Investment Adviser registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”).

PCM is not a broker-dealer and does not provide brokerage services. PCM is compensated exclusively for providing investment management services. Retail investors are charged a fee that is calculated as a percentage of assets under management. Brokerage and investment advisory fees differ and retail investors will incur additional commissions and other transaction costs that are charged by brokers that execute transactions for client accounts.

Free and simple tools are available to research firms and financial professionals at Investor.gov/CRS, which also provides educational materials about broker-dealers, investment advisers, and investing.

To help you get more information about our services, you will find “Conversation Starters” in each section below that you should ask our financial professionals, in addition to any other questions you wish to ask.

What investment services and advice can you provide me?

PCM’s investment management services are typically provided on a fully discretionary basis; however, retail investors may request that the Firm adhere to certain restrictions in managing their accounts. In most circumstances, the Firm will accommodate requested client restrictions if they do not interfere materially with the portfolio construction process. PCM offers a limited number of investment strategies and they are not tailored to the individual needs of retail investors.

PCM also provides discretionary investment management services to mutual funds, a private fund, institutions, and other private clients. The Firm generally has a minimum account size of $1,000,000, however, it can waive the minimum at its discretion.

Transactions for client accounts are reviewed prior to entry to ensure that they are consistent with any client imposed portfolio guidelines. The review is generally conducted by a portfolio manager. Client accounts are reviewed on a daily, monthly or quarterly basis, depending on activity in the account and the frequency of client reporting.

What fees will I pay?

PCM typically charges fees on a quarterly basis that are payable in arrears based upon the value of the assets in a client’s account on the last trading day of the calendar quarter. If the agreement between PCM and a client is terminated, the client will be responsible for paying a pro-rated fee for the quarter in which the account was terminated. PCM does not require retail investors to pay fees in advance; however some clients may choose to do so. If an agreement with a client that pays fees in advance is terminated, the Firm will refund a proportionate part of any prepaid fee.

In addition to our management fees, you will bear additional fees and expenses related to the investments in your account, such as brokerage commissions and charges for executing trades, custodian fees, account maintenance fees, exchange fees, and wire transfer and electronic fund fees.

For retail investors, the Firm typically sends fee invoices to the client’s custodian and thereby directs the custodian to pay the Firm’s agreed-upon investment management fee from the client’s account. The more assets you have in an advisory account, including cash, the more you will pay to us. We therefore have an incentive to recommend that you increase the assets in your account.

For some advisory accounts, typically called “wrap fee” programs, the asset-based fee includes most transaction costs and custody services, and as a result, wrap fees are typically higher than non-wrap advisory fees. The wrap fee does not include transaction fees for investments purchased or sold outside of the wrap fee program, including for transactions effected through other firms. For advisory accounts that are not part of a wrap fee program, you will pay a transaction fee whenever an investment is purchased or sold and you will also pay custodian fees.

You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce any amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying.

- Help me understand how these fees and costs might affect my investments. If I give you $10,000 to invest, how much will go to fees and costs, and how much will be invested for me?

What are your legal obligations to me when acting as my investment adviser? How else does your firm make money, and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we act as your investment adviser, we have to act in your best interest and not put our interest ahead of yours. At the same time, the way we make money creates some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the investment advice we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means.

PCM makes money only through its receipt of investment management fees from its clients. PCM manages multiple products that may have overlap, and PCM may manage accounts that pay performance-based fees. It is possible that PCM could make more money if an account that pays a performance fee performs better than accounts that do not. PCM recognizes that this creates the potential for conflicts of interest and the Firm has taken steps to address these conflicts. PCM maintains and enforces written policies and procedures designed to ensure that all accounts are treated equitably, regardless of the fee arrangement.

How do your financial professionals make money?

PCM's financial professionals are paid a fixed salary and a discretionary annual bonus. Discretionary bonuses are not derived from a particular formula, but are determined based on a number of factors, including: the annual performance of the strategies influenced by the financial professional, strategy performance over longer time periods, the total value of the assets in the strategy, the revenues generated by the strategy, the financial professional's contribution to the research process, PCM's profitability, and trends in industry compensation levels and practices. Since compensation may be impacted by firm revenues or profitability, it is possible under certain circumstances that a financial professional's compensation could be more positively impacted if an account that pays a performance fee performs better than accounts that do not. PCM recognizes that this creates the potential for conflicts of interest and the Firm has taken steps to address these conflicts.

Do you or your financial professionals have legal or disciplinary history?

No. Neither PCM nor its employees have been involved in any reportable regulatory event or disciplinary action.
